

PHILANTHROPIC GOULD.

The subjoined article from the Public Ledger will interest many persons who are curious concerning the private life and habits of noted business men:

Jay Gould has followed up his subscription of $10,000 to the Church Extension Society by a gift of $25,000 to the University of the City of New York. Mr. Gould has not heretofore appeared in the role of a philanthropist. He and his family have, it is said, distributed considerable sums in private charities, but his public benefactions have been few and far between. But no observer of Mr. Gould's career can fail to be impressed with the recent change in methods of this wonderful man. Twenty-five years ago Mr. Gould appeared to care little for public opinion. Bold, audacious—some would say unscrupulous—in his methods, he astonished the world with his operations. In his private life always pure, gentle and refined, in his public career he ran rough shod over every obstacle in his way. Those who would like to get a picture of what Gould was then should read James A. Garfield's report to Congress in regard to the gold panic of 1869, and the reports of the several legislative investigations of the management of Erie. But of late years Mr. Gould has been growing far more conservative in his methods, and more solicitous, apparently, of public opinion. His gift of $10,000 to the Church Extension Society has aroused an acrimonious controversy. Rev. Drs. Parkhurst and Rainsford have, as has been reported, severely criticized the circumstances surrounding the acceptance of the gift. The former wants to know how the money Mr. Gould gives away was acquired, and Dr. Rainsford does not hesitate to publicly arraign Mr. Gould as "a man who has done more to degrade and debase the morals of business life than any other citizen." To this Mr. Gould's Pastor, Rev. Dr. Paxton, retorts that the outrageous attacks should be stopped; that Mr. Gould is one of the loveliest men in the world in his home life, and that "if God Almighty weighed in the scales of eternal justice with Mr. Gould those other wealthy men and the carpers who now attack Mr. Gould I would like to know who would make the best showing." It is certainly strange that as Mr. Gould begins to use a portion of his great wealth in public philanthropy, should be met with the same kind of criticism that followed his operations in Erie and his exploits on Black Friday.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Way back in Minnesota they have heard of a lost mine in Nevada that is so wonderfully rich, that a party has organized to come out here and hunt for it with a clairvoyant. W. E. Gooding of St. Paul is the Manager. He with ten other men including the wizard will get here next month.

The good thing about this is that if these people spend a Summer in Nevada hunting a mine, they will find so much climate to the square inch that they will never want to go back to Minnesota. The contrast in comfort and health which they will experience will be a revelation to them.

The Bulletin says: Senator Hill thinks it an impertinence that Congressman Harter should ask him to state his position on the silver question. The trouble probably is that Hill has no position thereon. He is waiting to see which way the Democratic cat will jump. This cat is of the same genus as the Tammany tiger, but of a different species, and Hill is not yet quite familiar with its habits. It may be safely assumed that Hill will follow the cat until he can get the cat to follow him.

Senator Stewart has proposed an amendment to the Constitution which prohibits the election of a President to a second term of office. If the proposition should receive the votes of two-thirds of the members of both houses of Congress, it will then be submitted to the States, three-fourths of which are necessary to ratification.
